New Thought Wedding Ceremony Ends in Attack on Pastor.

HE DEFENDS HIS LIFE

Wife, However, Says She Is Going to Sue Him for Divorce, Naming Bridesmaid.

New York, Jan. 11 .- The harmoniou New Thought wedding in Acolian Hall today, in which Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Mensel, married by an alderman some weeks ago, were remarried according to the ceremony of the cult, ended in rasping discord when F. W. Sears, the minister who originated and performed the ceremony, was asked by a woman in the congregation:

"Has a married man, who is not free, living illicitly with another woman any right to teach harmony?"

This question, which followed an eloquent sermon on "Marriage," delivered by Sears at the close of the ceremony was invited by the minister himself, when he asked if any one present wished to ask anything about the New Thought Church. It lead to the discovery later that Sears and his wife, covery later that Sears and his wife, Dr. Julia Seton Sears, have been living apart since August, 1911, and that she intends to sue for separation, naming Miss Pauline Langdon, the maid of honor at today's wedding.

Taken aback by the unexpected question, Sears replied to it in the first person, defending his own life, letting it be known that he accepted it as a personal denunciation.

personal denunciation.

"Was the man to whom you refer mar-ried under the laws of harmony?" he asked.

"Is the man to whom you refer living illegally with some other woman? What is the proof? There are some people so filled with their own impurities that they cannot understand other people."

Life Pure, He Says.

Before he could continue he had to wait until the applause which rang out

"Three years ago," he went on, dropping into the first person, "I vowed to live under the laws of harmony. I have never stood before the world as perfect, but no one lives a more pure, a sweeter or a more holy life than L."

Mrs. Sears, a thoughtful, well-pre-served woman in her midforties, told to-night of her life with the head of the

New Thought Church.
"It is I who am 'Dr.' Sears," she began.

"I met this man twelve years ago and we were married soon after. I was in-terested in new thought, and had accom-plished something in it. I trained my husband in the fundamentals of the church band in the fundamentals of the church taught him the lessons that I had learned from the dim records of the past, and made him what he is today. On the seventh anniversary of our wedding we were in London: I had learned that he had been unfaithful to me, and we de-cided to separate. He returned to Ameri-ca, and soon after Miss Pauline, maid of honor at the wedding this morning, of monor at the wedding this morning, came into his life.

"After that a reconciliation with him was impossible. When I returned to America I left for the West, leaving him to his own way of life, and only wishing that nothing of this would ever come be re the public.
Thave evidence that he and Miss

"I have evidence that he and Miss Langdon sailed for England from Boston on September 12 of last year. They returned a month later. My attorney already has prepared my case, and I will bring suit against him immediately. I had hoped that this would not come up as it has, but it seems a sort of poetic justice. He usurped my place as the head of the absorbed Mithelman I founded With justice. He usurped my place as the head of the church I had founded. With my money and by what my brain had taught him, he forged to the front. It has been his own boldness which has brought this upon him."

Says It's Platonic.

Sears was seen later at the Hotel Astor He admitted that his relationship with Miss Langdon was so intimate that outsiders might misunderstand it. Would Put Burden of Proof of Innosiders might misunderstand it.

He said that he called upon her in her room at the Hotel Maryland often, unchaperoned, but declared that the friendship was platonic, and that she appealed to him in no other way than that of a simple friend.

"I admire her mind and her enthusiasm," he said. "She is sparkling, bright, energetic—in complete harmony with me in every way."

from the unexpected interruption Aside from the unexpected interruption today's ceremony was a study in harmony. It took place at 11 o'clock on the eleventh day of the month, the time when the rays of harmony vibrate most intensely, according to the belief of the cult. The bride and bridegroom were vouched for by Mr. Sears as being in perfect harmony. "I tested their vibrations," he said, "and found them in perfect harmony. The marriage should be a happy one." Miss Langdon was chosen maid of honor

Miss Langdon was chosen maid of honor because her own soul vibrated the most harmoniously with that of the bride. The other bridesmaids secured their places by the same power of vibration, as did the best man and the ushers.

Even the little flower girls and the pages had to vibrate correctly to get a pages had to vibrate correctly to get a job on the marriage platform.

Will Discuss Public Utilities.

to Keep United States Clean.

Because the nature of the American population in the twentieth century will depend largely on what is done for the upilit of Europeans on both sides of the sea, said Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, superintendent of the International Reform Bureau, last night in an address in Calreau, last night in an address in Calvary Baptist Church. The four most imvary Haptist Church. The four most important things which must be done are the exclusion of unfit immigrants, the evangelization of immigrants who are admitted, the inculcation of individual and social ethics among immigrants, and a spreading of the gospel of total abstinence on the other side by American workers.
